Merry Xmas to You from Us

Sport Activities

Well Organized

Officials of the local Athletic Association inform us that the preliminary organization has been completed for one of the busiest seasons in sport that Raymond has witnessed for a long time and if the usual support is forthcoming, Raymond youth interested in different lines of sport will be able to participate, and sport fans of the town and district will have a chance to see a great deal of basketball and boxing, and P.T. work before spring.

Basketball practice is going ahead now, and vacancies on the Jacks lineup are being filled up, or are filled up. The Association expect to enter the ladders in intermediate competition so that games in the Senior, Intermediate and High School leagues will be played here regularly. New material is being taken out, and with the season's basketball timber available and the addition of the new team, strong teams should be fielded in all three leagues and Raymond fans may well expect to see their teams near the top of the list throughout the entire season.

Kee's interest is being maintained too, in boxing. Ronald Folsom, High School teacher, and boxing instructor de luxe, has consented to take a class in the art of self-defense and would like about 25 in the class. "Ron" has made a real record for himself as boxing instructor in the B.Y.U., having worked for the past three years as assistant and instructor in that class in Provo, and in that time has coached some of the smartest boxers ever to don a glove in the Western States. This idea is that a good boxer is not necessarily the knock em down and drag em out type, but rather one who can defend himself and learn the art of scientific boxing. It is hoped that local boys with a year for this sport will take advantage of the splendid opportunity to get in and learn how to box. We have heard, though unofficially, that a number of good prospective boxers have been discouraged and quit because of unequal competition and a good hard knock down or two at the wrong time. These boys should get in again now and learn the art of boxing and build up their courage once more. Attention to timing and defending oneself and the physical benefits accruing from boxing, practice make it an art well worth while and in the services of Ronald we in Raymond have a rare opportunity to encourage these classes.

Officials of the Athletic Association are enthusiastic about the winter program. For once the association starts the season with a little credit in the bank. They can plan and execute their plans without worrying so much about the finances, and they can feel sure if any of the teams or boxers show real merit in the winter's work that playoffs eliminations and so on may be entered into, and the local boys given every chance to prove themselves. This should augur for success in every line during the winter, and we feel that it will. Here's hoping for the success of the Association in the sports they foster, and that the boys and men of the town will give the best they have for the furtherance of good, clean sport in all lines. Adios.

The busses Friday and Saturday nights brought home a great many teachers, Normal and Technical Institute students for the Xmas vacation.

Everyone has greatly missed the strings of colored lights this season. We understand that a number of the bulbs were found to be broken when they were getting ready to string them up, and the replacement have not arrived yet.

Santa Claus Royally Welcomed

The Opera House was a seething mass of young bodies as 700 children of the Town and district met in the Opera House to listen to a program prepared by the Public School pupils and teachers & presented preceding the appearance of Santa Claus, to a crowd estimated at 1,000 children and parents, who despite the rain storm in progress at the time, gathered for the event.

Gordon Dahl was Master of Ceremonies for the evening and announced the following program numbers after he had made a speech of welcome:

Singing Game by students of Grade II.

Celebrating Christmas in Other Lands, Grade III pupils.

Christmas Play by Students of Grade IV.

Good Night Song, Grade I.

Then Santa came on the scene and the kiddies actually mobbed him, made him back out of the stage in their surge and it took Principal Hicken and several other teachers to restore some semblance of order and get the children back in place, and then while Santa held his pack open the children deposited their toys, until he had three huge sacks full of gifts for the boys and girls who were unable to be present or too poor to have Christmas presents left them by Santa.

Then as the children filed out on their way home, members of the Committee stood at the two bottom doors and handed out the Christmas sacks for the children to take home and commence their Christmas feasting.

Santa did a fine job of his part of the program, and the enthusiasm knew no bounds as his bells started to ring and he came out on the stage.

The party appeared to be an outstanding success from all angles. The commotion spoiled the program for most of those present, except in the front rows and another year this might be looked into, & arrangements made so that all might hear. The co-operation of various groups in the Town was in the main all that could be asked, which of course, was essential to make such a party a success. Congratulations to those in charge of its arranging.

NEWS NOTES

Lee Brewerton was in Calgary on business Monday.

A Merry Xmas folks, and may all the joys of the festive season be yours.

The epidemic of flu still rages. Seven pupils were out of Miss Walker's room the first of the week because of it.

A few days now and all we will have of Christmas 1939 will be the sweet memories that the day brought and the lovely presents received from relatives and friends.

Bobbie Bennett took a spill from a bike Saturday night and fell in such a way that he had a slight concussion and had to be kept in bed for a couple of days.

Christmas fails in every year. It is still living. One day when a 100 per cent cheer is at dinner is nearly always assured.

The little boy of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. VanOrman took sudden ill the end of the week and had to be taken to the hospital for treatment. We understand that any danger is past now.

Graf Spee Scuttled

By Officers

Climaxing the biggest news plate was still open, and other of last week, viz., the naval battle between the Admiral Graf Spee, 10,000 ton pocket battleship of the Nazi fleet, and the Exeter, Achilles and Ajax near Montevideo, Uruguay, South America, in which the Graf Spee was so badly damaged she had to seek shelter in the port for repairs, the officers of the Graf Spee repeatedly acting on orders from Herr Hitler, blew up the ship with inter- mine and in three minutes she sank in the cove of the harbor three miles from her morning, in twenty-five feet of water with the superstructure still showing. Later reports stated that other blasts had wrecked this structure and that nothing remained to mark the graveyard of this powerful ship. All members of the crew were saved.

As the explosion occurred dwellers in Montevideo rushed to their roof tops, thinking that a fresh naval battle had commenced as the British Ajax and Achilles, joined by the Cumberland had been waiting in the mouth of the Plata river to engage the Graf Spee again as soon as she was out of territorial waters. Officials expected when she steamed up her boiler, and started away that she was going to try and reach Buenos Aires for further need repairs. All except officers and crew were surprised when an internal explosion shook the ship from stem to stern and shot clouds of smoke and fire high into the air, followed by others which sent her to Davey Jones' locker.

International complications may arise over the affair. She was given 72 hours in the harbor who, given instructions to depart she was seaworthy but not combatworthy at the end of that time. A gaping hole in her side just above the water line, through 14 inch armor plated was still open, and other damage from Wednesday's battle made her unable to meet in the gunfire of the British ships. She could have been intercepted with her crew in Montevideo, she could have gone to and other sacrificed herself and crew to the British warships lying in wait, but rather than do either, she was ordered by the High Command of the German fleet, and thus one of Germany's few pocket battleships rests on the ocean floor. The officers and crew went to Buenos Aires, and will face either internment, or discharge from the country on the grounds of their being survivors of a marine disaster. There are many strings to pull.

This and the aerial combat between British and German planes over the Heligoland naval base, which resulted in serious losses on both sides, were the high lights of the first of the week's war activities, the big aerial battle, the biggest since the beginning of the war possibly starting a new spurt on both sides. British reports claim 12 German ships shot down and seven British ships "unreported." Nazi reports claim 34 British ships destroyed and 2 Nazi. Believe which you like of these two reports. The first really sounds more plausible.

Don Wells who has been attending Mount Royal College in Calgary is home for the Christmas holidays.

May we take this opportunity of saying "Merry Christmas" and thanks for all your favors of the past year.

Cars standing out Wednesday night, looked like moving snow drifts Thursday morning. Along toward noon the sun warmed up the steel bodies of the cars enough that the snow could be pushed off.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Thanks for Christmas. In the midst of trouble at home and abroad, war, bloodshed, revolution and what not, we should be doubly thankful for Xmas and the spirit of giving that comes with it. True it is, that the real purpose and intent of the occasion is overshadowed by the feasting, drinking and gaiety that is indulged in, and yet back of all this, the spirit of the Christmas season seems to take us out of ourselves to a higher, nobler plane, to a life of sacrifice and giving for someone else; and with some of us this is about the only time when we do anything that the personal pronoun is not the motivating and controlling force. Thank God for Christmas.

As we grow older, we seem to get just as much thrill out of Christmas as ever, and to see the wonderment of the tiny tots as they undo their packages and see the wish of their heart gratified by Santa Claus, one gets even more joy out of Xmas than when he was little. How does Old Santa know what I wanted? How did he manage to bring so many for all the children all in one load? How can he travel all over the world in one night and distribute all these toys and how does he know where everyone lives? Yes, we have all been cheerful liars and have been cheerfully lied to, but we liked it and still do, and to hear these wise guys who would spoil the legend of Santa Claus, we think that they should have their noses stuck in a manger this season so that kiddies may keep on believing in their favorite saint and continue to get that big bang out of Xmas.

These days as strangely shaped packages arrive, with "Don't Open till Xmas" on them, we like to feel them & shake them and see if we can determine what is there. Curious boy I'll say we are curious; but rather than spoil the fun of Christmas we sigh and lay them under the tree, look at them forty times a day, but leave them there till Christmas morning when baby eyes are open early to see what has been left for them, and when older eyes enjoy with the small ones the superb joys of Christmas.

Yes we hear of these people who do not believe in Xmas. Who open their parcels Xmas eve so they can lie in the next morning. Well, that's alright. We tried it once, and Christmas that year was one of the flattest we ever experienced, so now we wait and enjoy with the kids the joy and thrill of undoing them with the rest of the family and being buried in paper, ribbon and gifts. We like to hear the shouts of glee when an especially wanted trinket is unwrapped, we like to see the clouds of anxiety pass over the faces as one party gets two or three in a row and the rest get none. There is a very sharp appraisal of all that is unwrapped to see how the usefulness and value compare, and because of all these things we like Christmas.

Then there is the Xmas dinner, and we like that too. We hope everyone has a Merry Christmas, and we feel sure that if we individually have the spirit of Christmas we shall have a merry one.

The Rotarians were a busy bunch Monday last when they gathered at the Club Cafe to fill the bags for the Xmas party held Wednesday evening. Oranges, peanuts and candy were poured into those bags in professional method and in an hour or a little less from the time the first sack was opened for the orange, 800 bags were filled, packed into boxes and already for old Santa to hand out to the boys and girls of the Town.

RAIN DECEMBER 20TH TO SET RECORD

A rain storm set in about dark Wednesday night and for a couple of hours it rained really hard, setting what is believed to be a record for Southern Alberta. Later in the evening it turned to snow, but through out the evening it remained quite warm and a great deal of snow melted as it fell. During the night it cooled off, the wind increased from the north and the snow, striking already water soaked buildings cars, etc., stuck there like glue and formed a sort of icy crust which remained throughout most of the day.

Thursday morning and throughout most of the day the wind was in the north and quite cool, but for this time of year delightful. Those who clamored for snow for Christmas have had some, although whether it will remain until Christmas is indefinite. It wouldn't take much sunshine to melt it and clear the ground again.

Contracts for construction of airfields supplying equipment and so on have already been let, agreements will be in effect for three years.

COST OF RAISING DAIRY HERD REPLACEMENTS

Comments often heard when prices of young dairy cattle are mentioned would indicate that many farmers do not appreciate fully the cost of raising a heifer to the age at which she first starts into production. Age at first calving is usually slightly over two years and as the average age of a dairy cow is probably not over six years, one third of her lifetime is non-productive. Some years ago the Lethbridge Experimental Station started keeping records on the cost of raising dairy heifers and sufficient data have been accumulated to permit of some preliminary remarks.

The life of the heifer has been divided into six months' periods. Records for 30 heifer calves up to six months of age, during the past five years, indicate the following average feed consumption per calf for normal development. Whole milk, 508 lbs.; skim milk, 1798 lbs.; grain, 310 lbs.; hay, 403 lbs.; and pasture, 12 days. Most of the calves were winter calves and, therefore, had very little pasture, thus the low figure for number of days on pasture. For the period under consideration, the average cost of feeding a calf for the first six months of its life was $15.53.

Records are available for 21 heifers between six months and twelve months of age and they show the following feed consumption: Skim milk, 1,010 lbs.; grain, 514 lbs.; hay 994 lb; pasture, 69 days. The average cost per heifer for this six months' period during the three years covered by this data was $16.85.

These figures indicate that the feed cost alone for the first year of life was over $30.00. This does not take into consideration the original cost of the calf in terms of bull service, nor does it include labour charges or shelter. When it is remembered that this cost is only the halfway mark to production it becomes evident that a heifer, ready to calve for the first time constitutes a considerable investment.

Complete data are not yet available at the Station to cover the remaining developmental period but it seems reasonable to assume that a well developed dairy heifer will constitute an investment of about $60.00 to $70.00 to the producer.

Usually the feed for the second year is not as expensive as for the first year but it should be available in liberal amounts to provide for continued development. Pasture and high quality legume hay will obviate the necessity of the use of much concentrate except during the last couple of months before the gestation period is terminated.

The Superintendent and staff of this Station wish to take this opportunity of wishing to all readers of this column, the editors and staffs of publications carrying this News Letter a very MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The annual rush at the local Post Office started Monday last and there has been no let up.

Arnold Zabriskie spent most of last week in bed with a case of flu, but was on the job again Monday.

DOUBLE MURDER AND SUICIDE AT ORION

Because she went out for a drive with another companion and presumably in a fit of jealousy, Ernest Brodine, 35, of Orion, shot and killed Irene Bogin, 21, mortally wounded Ivan Ridley, 23 and then drove out into the country about three miles and shot himself in the heart with a high powered rifle he used in the other killings. Jealousy was given as the motive.

He drove to the Bogin home and asked for Irene and was told she was out driving with Ridley. He then returned to his own home and procured the rifle and drove so as to intercept the car. He stopped it and the two young men got out of the cars to talk, when Brodine suddenly seized the gun and opened fire first on Ridley and then on Miss Bogin. Ridley managed to crawl back into the car and drive to a farm home where he told what had happened and asked that the police be notified. He later died on his way to the hospital. A manhunt was organized but Brodine was found dead in his car a few miles out on the highway. A coroner's jury was empaneled

Monday's reports stated that the first Canadiana contingent had landed safely in England and were warmly welcomed by British Government officials & the people. The crossing was accomplished without mishap and only inside government officials knew the troop ships had even commenced their journey. Hon. Anthony Eden, Hon. T. A. Cramer, and Hon. Vincent Massey officially welcomed the officers and men from Canada.

Radio reports Tuesday night stated that the Columbus, third largest ship of Germany's merchant marine had been scuttled 480 miles off the coast of United States. She was a ship of 32,000 tons and apparently was scuttled to avoid conflict with the British cruiser following her. Reports also state that a German tanker put into a Florida port to get away from an Allied cruiser that was chasing her. If the scuttling continues the seas will soon be swept free of the enemy merchant craft of any rate. The British supremacy of the seas seems to be maintaining its record.

At long last "Gone With the Wind," is ready for the theater Will as many people see the picture as read the book?

At a booksellers luncheon the publisher of the book was asked for an explanation of the title "Gone With the Wind."
He did not know until later. He passed his learning on and so here it is "Gone With the Wind" comes from Ernest Dowson's poem, usually known as "Cyn-ara," referring to the author's hectic and irresponsible life by which he hoped to banish the memory of an old love.

The last week a number of mothers have asked if "Grapes of Wrath" is a school book to be used as a literature book?

No it is not the book, it was not published until late summer and the school list was out long before. We just pass this on in case some have been misinformed.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Smith of Mountain View were Raymond visitors on Monday.

Captain Hans Langsdorff, master of the Graf Spee scuttled
in the mouth of the Plata River at Montevideo by order of Herr Hitler committed suicide
after seeing his 1,000 man crew safe in Buenos Aires. He was given full military honors at his funeral, attended by all his crew.
